CLASS COMMITTEE.

THOMAS FRANKLIN BROWNELL, Class Secretary,
CHARLES HARRISON TWEED,
GEORGE AUGUSTUS GODDARD.

The address of the Class Secretary is 302 Broadway, New York City.

TO THE CLASS OF 1865.

CLASSMATES:

IT gives me pleasure to present to you my Ninth Report, containing accounts of your lives for the past five years. These accounts have been prepared almost exclusively from the reports which you have made to me in reply to my circular of last April. The accounts of the fourteen who have made no reply have been prepared from such information as common rumor has brought to me.

As in case of the last Report, you no doubt will notice that I have less of incident to narrate than in the earlier Reports. It is but fair to remind you that I do not claim to be writing a history of new brooms. I have narrated all that you have reported to me; but you have less to report. Even your activity in writing poetry seems to have subsided.

During the past five years five of your number have died — Churchill, Dabney, Dillaway, Hoyt, and Tiffany. Sketches of their lives will be found in the following pages. Four children have been born to us, making the entire number 204. This is 1196 less than the number at first proposed. Our class certainly holds the record among the classes for high percentage of children lost. The event in the past five years which gives us all pleasure has been the presentation to the college of our Class memorial window, which was placed in Memorial Hall on Commencement Day, 1900.

I have attempted to outline at the end of the Report the statistics relating to births, marriages, deaths, and other matters. These are without doubt imperfect. I shall be glad to receive information of any errors or omissions which you may perceive in these or in the personal notices. Please inform me promptly also of any changes in your addresses, and of any matters of Class interest.

With kindest wishes for you all,

I remain, very sincerely yours,

T. FRANK. BROWNELL,

Class Secretary.

New York City, 302 Broadway,
July 24, 1900.

He is a member of the Boston Art Club, the Arlington Boat Club, and the Arlington Golf Club. He is also a member of the Middlesex, the Massachusetts, the Home Market, and the Republican—four Republican political clubs. He is still president of the Middlesex Club. He is also a life member of the Young Men's Christian Union, and of the Mercantile Library Association of Boston.

Address: 48 Congress street, Boston, Mass.

JOHN HENRY BRADFORD. Since 1884 he has remained treasurer of Coney Island Jockey Club, and since 1896 steward of that club.

He has of late years suffered much from a nervous disease which interferes greatly with his walking. Since 1897 he has resided in New York city.

Address: 279 Lexington avenue, New York city, N. Y.

THOMAS FRANKLIN BROWNELL. He is still engaged in the practice of law in New York city.

He holds the following offices: chairman of the Committee on Admissions in the Century Club; member of the Council and chairman of the Committee on Literature and Art in the University Club; member of the Board of Managers and chairman of the Committee on Literature and Art in the Harvard Club and member of the Executive Committee of the Phi Beta Kappa Society — all of New York city. He is also a member of the Barnard Club and of the Civil Service Reform Association, also of New York city. He was elected in 1899 an honorary member of the American Whig Society of Princeton University.

Address: 302–304 Broadway, New York city, N. Y.

ALBERT CLARK BUZELL. During the past five years he has remained in Exeter, New Hampshire. He has not been engaged in business.

Address: Exeter, N. H.

*JOHN WILKINS CARTER. He was born in Boston, Mass., 30 June, 1843.

He left the Class at the end of the Freshman year. He enlisted as private in the Seventeenth United States Infantry, 2 September, 1862; was commissioned Second Lieutenant, 10 July, 1863; and First Lieutenant, 23 September, 1863. He resigned, 9 December, 1864. After leaving the army he became a member of the firm of Carter Brothers & Company, engaged in the wholesale stationery business in Boston. This firm was dissolved in 1872, and he became member of the new firm of Carter, Dinsmore, & Company, and engaged in the business of manufacturing writing-fluids, inks, and mucilage. He remained in this business until his death.

He was married, 21 January, 1874, to Helen Burrage, daughter of Johnson Carter and Emmeline Burrage.

Carter was a member of many social and scientific organizations, including the American Social Science Association, the American Artistical Association, the American Forestry Association, the American Economic Association, and the New England Historic Genealogical Society. He was a member of the Boston Society of the New Jerusalem Church. He was president of the Massachusetts Reform Club. He wrote various articles for publication, including lectures on Egypt and the Nile, Mount Sinai and the Holy Land, and Spain, and reports on the sewerage and drainage of Newton, Mass.

His home was in West Newton, Mass. He was there identified with various clubs and business men's organizations, and at one time was president of the Newton Lyceum Association. He was one of the most active members of the Newton Tariff Reform Club. He was always much interested in governmental affairs, serving at one time as alderman, representing Ward Three of Newton. He devoted much time while in that office to the problem of sewerage, and went abroad to study the various systems in Europe. Upon his return, he submitted an exhaustive report, as chairman of the sewerage committee, and many of his ideas were incorporated in the local system finally adopted.

In 1893 he received the degree of A. B. from Harvard University as of the Class of 1865.

He was accidentally drowned, 5 July, 1895, while bathing in the surf at Harwich, Mass. His widow and four children survived him. By his will he bequeathed to Harvard University the sum of $25,000, contingent upon the value of his estate.

JAMES READ CHADWICK. He has been practising medicine in Boston since the last Report, except in summers, which have been passed on his farm at Chocorua, N. H., and the summer of 1896, which he spent in travelling through Holland, Belgium, and France. At Geneva, Switzerland, in August, 1896, he attended an International Congress of Gynecology, being one of the honorary presidents.

He was president of the Obstetrical Society of Boston, in 1896 and 1897, president of the American Gynecological Society in 1897, and delivered the annual address on "An Historical Sketch of Abdominal Surgery."

On 30 November, 1895, he delivered one of the addresses at the "Banquet and Presentation in honor of John S. Billings, M. D., LL. D.," in Philadelphia.

At the opening of the new Hall and Library of the Medical and Chirurgical Faculty of the State of Maryland on 11 January, 1896, he delivered the address on "Medical Libraries: Their Development and Use."

On 13 April, 1895, he read a paper on "Bicycle Saddles for Women," before the Obstetrical Society of Boston.

On 28 November, 1898, he delivered an address at a special meeting to raise funds for a new building for the Boston Medical Library, of which he is now serving his twenty-fifth year as librarian. He is a member of the committee to raise the funds, and to erect the building, which will be completed at an expense of $150,000 in the autumn of 1900.

He is still president of the Massachusetts Cremation Society, which has raised enough money to complete its chapel and crematorium during the present year, and is eminently successful, the cremations for 1899 having reached the large total of 230.

On 19 May, 1900, he delivered an address at the dedication of the new library building of the "Medical Society of the County of Kings" in Brooklyn, N. Y.

In 1896, he was elected Honorary Fellow of the "Medical and Chirurgical Faculty of the State of Maryland," and, in 1900, an Honorary Fellow of the Obstetrical Society of London, England.

His daughter, Norah Chadwick, was married, 29 April, 1897, to Julian Codman, of Boston, Mass.

Address: 270 Clarendon street, Boston, Mass.

ALBRO ELMORE CHASE. He has remained in Portland, Me., engaged in teaching as principal in the high school and in practising law.

In Masonry he has become a Past Grand Master, Past Grand High Priest, Past Grand Commander, and an honorary member of the thirty-third degree. In Odd Fellowship he has become a Past Grand Master. He has also become a Past Great Sachem of the Imperial Order of Red Men. He is still associate editor of The Masonic Journal, and has edited a digest of the laws of the I.O.O.F. for Maine, which was published in 1900. He is a member of the Maine Historical Society, the Maine Genealogical Society, the Portland Athletic Club, the Maine Press Association, the Maine State Bar Association, and the Appalachian Mountain Club.

His son, Edward Nichols Chase, was graduated from Harvard College in 1896, and from the Harvard Law School in 1899.

Address: 85 Exchange street, Portland, Me.

*JOHN WESLEY CHURCHILL. He was born at Fairlee, Vermont, 26 May, 1839. He died at Andover, Mass., 13 April, 1900.

Since the time of the last Report, Churchill remained at Andover, faithfully discharging with eminent success the duties of his professorship of Pulpit Delivery and those of the Bartlett professorship, to which last he was appointed in 1897. A short illness, which caused alternately emotions of hope and alarm among his friends, preceded his death.

The death of very few, if any, of our classmates could bring such sense of personal loss to so many of us as that of Churchill. He was in close touch with many who, by environment, by temperament, or by occupation have little to bind us together save the strong and lasting tie of classmates. But Churchill was almost intimate with nearly every one, and the secret of this characteristic was his own personality. Everyone, however separated from him by the controlling forces which make up our lives of thought and action, found in him something to admire, to respect, and especially to love: something which, perhaps unconsciously, drew us to him so that we each felt that in some peculiar way we shared his affection and regard. It is a lovely and lovable quality of human nature, and it is rare. It cannot exist without thorough integrity and sincerity; without sufficient intellectual gifts to make the person interesting; without a certain charm of presence which will win and keep the affections of other men; without that quality which in human nature is the expression of the same law as that which governs the centripetal forces of the universe. These qualities made him in a large degree to our circle what Agassiz was to that charmed circle the recollection of which Lowell has preserved for all time.

> " How large an aspect! nobly unsevere,
> With freshness round him of Olympian cheer,
> Like visits of those earthly gods he came:
> His look, wherever its good-fortune fell,
> Doubled the feast without a miracle,
> And on the hearthstone danced a happier flame."

His death has left us a sweet and tender memory, and the example of his life a source of inspiration and of pride.

Instead of a biographical notice, all the elements of which can be found in detail in previous Class Reports, it has seemed better to me to insert here a tribute to him prepared at my request by his associate and friend, Dr. Alexander McKenzie, of Cambridge. C. W. C.

When Churchill left college, he had a distinct purpose relating to his work in the world, and it was characteristic of him that this was born in his heart and fostered by his experience. It was generous, like himself. He knew the worth of preaching, when properly ordered, and he was compelled to see that the power of the pulpit would be enhanced if the men standing in it were able to give a more worthy utterance to the truth which they believed. Whatever others might think of his design it held his confidence, and he determined to create the power which was wanting. While he gave to this his high intention, he did not know that it was to become his profession, as it proved to be. In the Theological Seminary at Andover he found himself and his work. His skill in reading, the power of giving to good words their meaning, by his tone, his accent, and emphasis, and the spirit he breathed into his voice, with the wide range of his method, in part natural and in part acquired by patient discipline, impressed his fellow students and his instructors, until beyond his early proposal it was carried into the employment of his years. With the enlargement of his own learning came a deeper sense of the need of giving to learning every advantage. Few men are more evidently called to their work. He had a true vocation and nobly he fulfilled it. He turned aside from the office of a parish clergyman, and became a minister to ministers. It was a high calling. In his department of teaching he was at the heart of the Seminary, and his influence was felt through the whole institution. He was the ally of every professor. He taught at Andover for thirty-two years. Not there alone. He taught in the Harvard Divinity School, and at Dartmouth, Amherst, and other colleges. From him the boys of Phillips Academy learned to speak intelligently, forcibly, agreeably. The girls of Abbot Academy learned to read clearly, impressively, pleasantly. He was not a teacher of elocution, but of thought and life, and of the expression to which these were entitled. His reading was a commentary. His intonation was interpretation. His personal endowment was continually enlarged, and his instruction broadened with his studies. He delighted in literature for its own sake. He knew the philosophy and theology of his time. He was the desired preacher in many churches. He was, as a writer, always instructive. His thought was accurate, and its expression admirable.

In the controversy which burdened the air around him he had his name and place—yet he was not a combatant. He could defend his belief, but he was generous and catholic in his opinions, and he respected an enlightened honesty.

It was natural that his work should be advanced. He took higher rank when he was placed in the chair of his distinguished teacher and those who followed him. It was the extension of his work to include the whole method of the minister's calling: the construction of sermons, as well as the way to pronounce them; the ordering of worship, the service of a pause, the direction of a church, the duties of a citizen, the whole volume of a minister's character and conduct. Though he had never been in charge of a parish he had a wide knowledge of the churches and of all which appertains to them, and with a trained judgment and unerring taste he was a wise counsellor. He knew the largeness of his greater work and he was determined to succeed in it, and at once. He did succeed. His promotion was justified. But with all his earlier professional cares, he became renowned as a reader for the people. No name was more attractive than his; no voice more admired than his when, with learning and discretion, he led willing minds in ways familiar to himself. In his later years he had no time for this service, but his fame in it will not be lost.

He made friends everywhere. He learned men. He comprehended life. He was always dignified, and always genial. Thoroughly in earnest, he gave a charm even to the lightest hours. He made upon society an impression which will endure. While many admired him, and enjoyed him, he had the closer friendships which are the best treasure. Not many men have held to themselves in all their course from college days through maturer years so true esteem and affection. Strong men made no concealment of their love for him. He deserved it, for he was a friend indeed. The stranger found him courteous; the boy who sought his aid received it; the young man venturing upon life could depend upon his liberal counsel. To a friend he was always at leisure. His great heart had room enough for all, though there were inner places for the men he loved the best.

His home was his own and was like himself. It formed itself around him. There was a charm in his simple, graceful hospitality. His house will be remembered by those who often entered its cheerful rest and were gladdened with the welcome of those who made its life. It would not be easy to find a home more contentedly happy.

He was at the height of his calling; his honorable ambition was gratified. He seemed as one at the door of a greater opportunity, entering upon his exalted career, in something more of rest with none of toil, and with his reward assured. Then suddenly the call to other service found him. He answered, as his custom was, and moved on.

Many hearts turned toward the hill where he had been. It was a wonderful gathering for the last service. The great assembly in the sanctuary where he had served was quiet in its profound emotion. It was a company of men bereaved, and all were grateful to have known him. With words from the Book he reverenced, with hymns sung by those who loved him, with a simple prayer, men waited around him, then bore him to his rest, among the honored and the great with whom his name will stand. Among them all there was no truer heart, no braver life, no gentler spirit. There was no more cherished friend than John Wesley Churchill.

CHARLES WARREN CLIFFORD. He has continued to reside in New Bedford, Mass., engaged in the practice of law as a member in the firm of Crapo, Clifford and Clifford. In September, 1898, he was appointed by the Governor of Massachusetts one of the commissioners for consolidating and arranging the public statutes of Massachusetts, which duty has taken most of his time since the appointment, and in which he is still engaged. He was in 1899 an original member of the Maritime Law Association of the United States. In February, 1900, he was elected vice-president of the New Bedford Institution for Savings, and in April, 1900, president of the New Bedford Bar Association. On 22 May, 1900, he was elected one of the directors of the American Unitarian Association.

He has delivered the following addresses:

5 December, 1895. Address at the annual dinner of the Dartmouth Club.

21 November, 1896. Address at the annual dinner of the Colonial Society.

26 January, 1898. Address at memorial exercises upon the death of Judge Nelson.

10 April, 1898. Address at memorial exercises upon the death of Judge Bennett.

From January to April, 1896, he made a tour of the Orient, visiting Egypt, Palestine, Constantinople, and Athens. The summer of 1897 he spent in England.

Address: Care of Crapo, Clifford and Clifford, New Bedford, Mass.

JOSEPH COOK. In September, 1895, while overtasked in the lecture field during a second visit to Australia, he was overtaken by nervous prostration, brought on, as his physicians affirmed, by excessive work for twenty years. He returned to Japan, meeting Mrs. Cook there, and other friends, and in December came back to America and passed the winter at Clifton Springs, N. Y. Since then he has spent his time, in the six months from May to November, at his country place at Cliff Seat, Ticonderoga, N. Y., and the rest of the year at Newton Centre, Mass. For more than a year his health has been steadily improving, and his physicians expect his complete recovery. He has done much reading and some writing for publication during his enforced rest.

An essay on Professor Park and his Pupils, and a lecture on New Defences of the Lord's Day, both published in Boston, are among his latest productions. He gave seven new lectures in Boston the past winter, four of them in his series of Boston Monday Noon Lectures, now numbering 250 in all since 1875. He has lately been participating in the Lake Mohonk Arbitration Peace Conference, lecturing at Albany, and continuing his work as author at Cliff Seat.

Address: Newton Centre, Mass., or 17 Beacon street, Boston, Mass.

HORATIO GREENOUGH CURTIS. He has continued president of the Old Boston National Bank of Boston, Mass., residing in Boston in winter and in Nahant, Mass., in summer. He is still treasurer of the Massachusetts Anti-Double Taxation League, advocating yearly before the taxation committees of the legislature of Massachusetts the repeal of the tax on shares of foreign corporations and opposing all measures tending to aggravate the evils of double taxation in Massachusetts.

He sailed for Europe, 26 September, 1896, and sailed for home, 21 November, 1896. He sailed again for Europe, 30 April, 1898, and for home, 2 July, 1898.

From 1 January, 1898, to 1 January, 1900, he was a member of the Merchants' Municipal Committee appointed by Mayor Quincy on the recommendation of the Boston Board of Trade to confer with the Mayor on such measures of city business as he desired to lay before them.

He was also chairman of a committee, including also three employing printers, which was appointed by Mayor Quincy to investigate the working of the Boston city printing plant, and to report thereon.

He has also written for daily papers and addressed associations on the subjects of the currency, finance, and taxation.

He is a member of the Verulam Society of Boston, formed to consider the theory of a connection of Francis Bacon with the authorship of the Shakespeare poems and plays.

Address: 179 Marlborough street, Boston, Mass.

*WALTER DABNEY. He was the son of Frederick and Roxana (Stackpole) Dabney, and was born, 30 October, 1844, at Fayal, Azores, where he was fitted for college by a private tutor, Eugene Frederick Bliss, H. U., 1858.

He lived at his mother's home in Cambridge, throughout his college course, and this fact undoubtedly prevented his making such intimate acquaintance with his classmates as results from closer association in college rooms and at boarding tables. He was a big, strong, clean-minded boy of healthy and simple tastes: fond of athletics and sports; a good gymnast; stroke of our Class crew; and already showed that peculiar deftness which, later, made him quite remarkable as a billiard player. Like his four brothers, all graduates of Harvard, he had received good musical instruction, playing the violin very well and singing a true and strong bass; so that he rendered good service in the Pierian Sodality and in the Glee Club.

Soon after being graduated, he engaged in the cotton brokerage business, in Boston, in which he continued until his last illness, winning success against strong competition by his trustworthiness, steadfastness, and intelligence.

He steadily developed an independence of judgment which was based upon a very careful and thorough study of what interested him in private and public affairs. Although he had a hearty appreciation of humor, he shunned vain discussions and light talk, being rather reticent except when the subject of conversation was one upon which he was well informed.

He was a very good whist-player, his sound mind and good memory equipping him for all games of cards as his strong body and easy control of his muscles fitted him for success in physical sports. Those to whom he opened himself knew him to be of an affectionate and loyal disposition, and very appreciative and responsive to kindness.

He was a member of the Somerset Club, the Eastern Yacht Club, the Exchange Club, the Nahant Club, the Country Club, and the Boston Athletic Association, residing in Boston and passing his summers at Nahant.

He was married, 24 November, 1874, to Harriet Heath Larkin, daughter of Charles Larkin, of Boston. A daughter, Susanna Rich, was born 7 October, 1884, and she, with her mother, survives him. Ins pite of his strong frame and regular life, he died of cerebral hemorrhage in Boston, 20 December, 1899. H. G. C.

*GEORGE WALES DILLAWAY. He died, 7 May, 1898, at the McLean Hospital in Waverley, Mass. He was born in Roxbury, Mass, 18 October, 1845. He entered college with the Class, and was graduated in 1865, standing fourth in rank. During the first year after graduation he was a private tutor in Canandaigua, N. Y. He joined the Harvard Law School, 15 September, 1866, and remained there until 29 May, 1868, being for a portion of the time a proctor in the college. He spent the summer of 1868 in travel in Europe. From December, 1868, till 1 April, 1871, he was a law student in the office of Evarts, Southmayd and Choate in New York city. He received the degree of LL. B. from Harvard College in 1869, and was admitted to the

New York State bar in May of that year. In 1871, he formed a law partnership with E. L. Andrews, under the firm name of Andrews and Dillaway. On 25 October, 1872, H. L. Burnett joined this partnership, and the name was changed to Burnett, Andrews and Dillaway. This partnership was dissolved in May, 1873. He continued the practice of his profession in the city of New York, being from May, 1885, until his last illness a member of the firm of Dillaway, Davenport and Leeds. In the summer of 1893, while at Mt. Desert, he was suddenly attacked by mental disease, and from that time until his death he remained in the McLean Hospital, where he died.

LEWIS ALLEN DODGE. Not heard from. I am informed that he is residing in Boston, Mass., having an office in the Exchange Building, 50 State street, in that city.

*ORLANDO WITHERSPOON DOE. He died in Boston, Mass., 10 December, 1890. See Secretary's Report, No. 8.

*WALTER HENRY DORR. He died at South Boston, 17 June, 1880. See Secretary's Report, No. 6.

WILLIAM BULLARD DURANT. He has continued the practice of law in Boston, residing in Cambridge. He has held no political office since 1898, except the presidency of the Cambridge Water Board.

His oldest son, Aldrich, is now in the Sophomore Class in Harvard University.

Address: 19 Congress street, Boston, Mass.

CHARLES JAMES ELLIS. Not heard from. I am informed that he is still a resident of Los Angeles, Cal.

WILLIAM HENRY FISH. In October, 1897, finding that his wife's health required a change of climate, he resigned his pastorate of the First Church at Dedham, Mass., and moved to Colorado Springs, Col., where he has been ever since as minister of the All Souls' (Unitarian) Church. Several of his sermons have been printed in the local daily papers and have been published by his church in pamphlet form: one, upon Mr. Moody's Theories and the Gospel of Christ, and the other upon The Apostles' Creed and the True Basis of Christian Fellowship.

Address: 1501 Wood avenue, Colorado Springs, Col.

GEORGE ALBERT FISHER. Not heard from. He is still engaged in the practice of law in Boston, Mass.

Address: Boston, Mass.

*ISAAC VANDERPOEL FRENCH. He died at New York city, 22 February, 1879. See Secretary's Report, No. 6.

WILLIAM ABRAMS FRENCH. He has continued in the crockery, china, and glassware business in Boston, Mass., as president of the Abram French Company. He retired in January, 1900, from the office of president of the Massachusetts National Bank of Boston.

His eldest daughter, Elizabeth Sophia French, was married, 6 November, 1895, to Edward Andrews Clark, of Boston. A grandson, Edward A. Clark, Jr., was born, January, 1899. His youngest son, Harold French, is a member of the Class of 1901 in Harvard College. His youngest daughter, Helen Olivia French, was married, 14 June, 1900, to Asaph Churchill.

He is a member of the Union Club, the Athletic Association, and the St. Botolph Club, of Boston, the Country Club of Brookline, and the University Club and Harvard Club of New York.

Address: P. O. Box 1524, or 91 Franklin street, Boston, Mass.

GEORGE SEWARD FROST. He has remained in Dover, N. H., engaged in the practice of law and in the performance of the duties of his office as justice of the police court.

He is a director of the Strafford National Bank of Dover, trustee of St. Mary's School of Concord, N. H., Senior Warden of St. Thomas' Church of Dover, and a Mason of the thirty-second degree.

His youngest daughter, Elizabeth Rollins Frost, is a member of the Freshman Class in Smith College.

Address: Dover, N. H.

GEORGE AUGUSTUS GODDARD. He has continued to live in Boston, Mass., in winter, and in summer at Beverly, Mass. He has been for twenty-three years treasurer of the New England Hospital for Women and Children; for sixteen years treasurer of the Goddard Land Company in Brookline, Mass.; for twenty-two years clerk of the Associated Charities of Boston, and for seventeen years treasurer of the Adams Nervine Asylum.

He is also a member of thirteen clubs and a justice of the peace.

He is scribe of the Triangle Club of Boston.

He visited Europe in the summer of 1896, and Canada and Europe in the winter of 1897–98. He was married, 20 July, 1897, to Alice Carter Holmes, of Boston. A son, Amory Goddard, was born in Boston, 24 January, 1900.

Address: 10 Tremont street, Boston, Mass.

WILLIAM JASON GOLD. He writes as follows:

"In answer to your circular I have but little to record.

"This year is the fifteenth since I came to the Western Theological Seminary, the Episcopal Theological School of Chicago. During the whole of that period I have had charge of the departments of New Testament Exegesis and of Liturgics. For twelve years I held the position of subdean (the Bishop of Chicago being Dean); but in January, 1897, the office of Dean was abolished, and I was elected to the headship of the school with the title of Warden, which position I still hold. I have continued to be the Senior Examining Chaplain of the Bishop of Chicago. I was elected a deputy to the General Convention in 1895, and again in 1898, being the fifth and sixth times, consecutively, that that honor has been conferred upon me. At the convention of 1898 I prepared for the Prayer-Book Committee an exhaustive report on the 'Standard Bible,' which is printed in the Journal of that convention, and was appointed chairman of a special committee to propose legislation on that subject and to report to the convention of 1901. My relation to The Living Church, as editor-in-chief, came to an end in February of the present year, after twelve years of exacting labor. The paper has changed hands and is transferred to another location. I have contributed occasional articles to The Church Eclectic, a monthly publication, and to The Churchman, of New York, and The Church Standard, of Philadelphia. I have printed no books or anything of lasting importance. My best productions (best from my own point of view), remain in manuscript.

"I have received no new degrees, joined no additional societies, and know nothing of any of our classmates. I have met none of them for at least twenty-five years, except McIlwain once, about a dozen years ago.

"I have a daughter who is entered as a student at the University of Illinois, at Champaign, Ill."

Address: 1113 Washington Boulevard, Chicago, Ill.

FRANCIS BUNKER GREENE. Since the last Report, he has continued to reside in Boston, Mass., in winter, and in New Bedford, Mass., in summer. He is not engaged in any business.

Address: Post-Office Box 452, New Bedford, Mass.

*ALFRED GREENOUGH. He died at Rangoon, India, 6 June, 1884. See Secretary's Report, No. 6.

DAVID STODDARD GREENOUGH. He continues to reside in Jamaica Plain, Mass., in winter, and in East Gloucester, Mass., in summer. He is not engaged in business. He is a director in various telephone companies.

A daughter, Mary, was born, 6 September, 1896. His son, David Stoddard Greenough, Jr., is a member of the Class of 1903, in Harvard College.

Address: 10 Tremont street, Boston, Mass.

JOHN GREENOUGH. In September, 1898, he retired form active business, and the firm of Poor and Greenough was dissolved. He has resigned from all the railway companies with which he was connected. He has become a trustee of the New York Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor; of the New York Kindergarten Association; and of the American Geographical Society. He is a member of the University, the Tuxedo, and the Harvard clubs and of the Down Town Association of New York city. He resides, as heretofore, in winter at 31 West 35th street, New York city, and in summer at Tuxedo, New York, or at Gloucester, Mass.

Address: 31 West 35th street, New York city, N. Y.

*JAMES IRA HANSON. He died at Woburn, Mass., 15 April, 1888. See Secretary's Report, No. 7.

GEORGE ANTHONY HILL. Not heard from. I am informed that he continues to reside in Cambridge, Mass., and that he is engaged in teaching and in writing and publishing mathematical text-books.

Address: Cambridge, Mass.

FRANK MERRICK HOLLISTER. He continues to reside in Buffalo, N. Y., and remains associate editor of the Buffalo Commercial. He is a member of the Buffalo Club, and has been secretary of the Council of the University of Buffalo for ten years past. He is also either a member of the Saturn Club and dean of the Thursday Club, or dean only of the Saturn Club and a member of the Thursday Club.

In reply to the Secretary's inquiries as to marriage and children, he replies that he has "only the same old marriage" and the "same old children." He also reports that there are no circumstances in his life during the past five years that are proper for publication to his classmates.

Animated by the pleasant memories of the historic journey which he made through Bristol County, Mass., in the summer of 1885, and the general information which he then acquired, he ventured from home again in the spring of 1900, and travelled in Southern California for two months in a search for further knowledge.

Address: 186 North street, Buffalo, N. Y.

*JABEZ SILAS HOLMES. He died at the Profile House, New Hampshire, 13 September, 1884. See Secretary's Report, No. 6.

HENRY HOOPER. He has continued the practice of medicine and surgery in Chicago, Ill.

He remains professor of obstetrics in the Chicago Policlinic, president and obstetrician-in-chief at St. Mary's Maternity Hospital, and obstetrician at the Emergency Hospital in Chicago.

He also remains an active member of the Association of Military Surgeons of the United States.

In addition to the societies mentioned in the last Report, he is a member of the American Medical Society, of the Onwentsia Golf Club, of the Edgewater Golf Club, of the Huron Mt. Shooting and Fishing Club, and of the Saddle and Cycle Club of Edgewater.

He was elected, 24 November, 1896, first vice-president of the Chicago Harvard Club.

Address: 541 North State street, Chicago, Ill.

EDWARD DOWNER HOSMER. Not heard from. I am informed he is still engaged in the practice of law in Chicago, Ill.

*JAMES OTIS HOYT. He was born at Haverhill, Mass., 18 September, 1842. After graduating at the high school at Haverhill and at Phillips Exeter Academy, he was admitted to Harvard College as a freshman. Throughout his entire college course he maintained a high standard of scholarship, being particularly distinguished for his mathematical ability, and graduated twelfth in the class. His thorough manliness and straightforwardness of character gained him the respect not only of his class, but of all the members of the university with whom he was brought in contact. His physical strength and his skill in all the athletic sports of the day, which were unusual, constituted a conspicuous part of his college career. In his junior year, he received the first Boylston prize for an English dissertation on "Heat as a Mode of Motion," and in his senior year, the second prize for an essay on political economy, for which Carey, of Philadelphia, the well-known writer on that subject, sent him a complete set of his voluminous works.

After graduation, he taught for a year at St. Mark's School, Southborough, Mass., then just established. He then returned to Cambridge and entered the Law School. He was appointed proctor in 1866, and assistant instructor in history in 1868. On taking his degree in law, he was admitted to the Massachusetts bar, and in July, 1868, went to Europe, where he spent nearly a year. Returning from Europe, he went at once to New York and entered the law office of Evarts, Southmayd and Choate. He was admitted to the New York bar in December, 1869. Subsequently he was for a short time in the law office of Barlow, Hyatt and Olney, and for a few months in that of Miller, Peet and Opdyke. In May, 1871, he formed a partnership with Richard C. Fellows, Esq., in the practice of his profession. Of this firm and its successors, Fellows, Hoyt and Schell, and Hoyt and Schell, he was a member until his death. He was a director of, and general counsel to, the Manhattan Life Insurance Company, general counsel to the National Butchers' and Drovers' Bank, and one of the attorneys of the Manhattan Savings Institution, all of New York. It was in his long connection with the insurance company that he became best known to the bench and bar, and as a life insurance lawyer he achieved a high reputation.

He was a member of many clubs and associations, among them the Union, Union League, Riding, Harvard, Lawyers', Adirondack League, Association of the Bar, and New England Society, of New York, and the Roanoke Island Fishing and Shooting Club. Besides his town house in New York, which he built about three years before his death, he had a country seat at Bellport, Long Island, N. Y., and a shooting-box in the Adirondacks.

He had travelled widely in this country and had visited Cuba and Mexico, and made several extensive tours in Europe with his family.

He married, 14 June, 1896, Emily, daughter of Louis S. and Emily (Schell) Fellows, of New York, who, with three daughters, survives him.

His death, which occurred 6 December, 1896, following a brief illness due to an unsuspected affection of the liver, was a shock to a large circle, professional and social, and elicited a very hearty and spontaneous expression of regret from many and varied sources. L. C. L.

WALTER HUNNEWELL. He has remained in Boston, Mass., engaged in business with H. H. Hunnewell and Sons.

Address: 87 Milk street, Boston, Mass.

PATRICK TRACY JACKSON. For the past five years he has continued in the cotton business in Boston, Mass. He has resided in the winter for the past twenty-nine years at 17 Follen street in Cambridge, and in the summer at Pride's Crossing, Mass.

In the spring of 1899, he went to Brazil to visit his second son, who is in business there, and took a trip of six hundred miles up the Amazon River to Tapajas, the head of navigation of that river.

His youngest son, Frederick Gray Jackson, is a member of the Class of 1903 in Harvard College. His daughter, Susan Loring Jackson, has studied at Radcliffe College for a year and a half.

*GEORGE JOTHAM JOHNSON. He died in Old Orchard Beach, Maine, 27 August, 1885. See Secretary's Report, No. 6.

ALBERT RIPLEY LEEDS. He has remained at Hoboken, N. J., as professor of chemistry in the Stevens Institute of Technology. He writes as follows:

" The present year makes the thirtieth of my connection with the Stevens Institute of Technology, as professor of chemistry. My principal occupation outside of lectures and laboratory instruction at the Institute has been as consulting chemist to the water departments of cities, more especially of Philadelphia, Wilmington, Reading, Minneapolis, Albany, New London, Elmira, Hoboken, Jersey City, Newark, Atlanta, Jacksonville, Norfolk, Scranton, Kansas City, New Orleans, Buffalo, and Brooklyn. This work has involved the performance up to date of something more than three thousand microscopical, biological, and chemical analyses, and I look back upon it with some pleasure as having been in a certain sense in the nature of a public service.

" Growing out of the investigations incident to the performance of these duties, I was led to devise various processes for the purification of water, which were first developed by the Pure Water Supply Company, and subsequently by successive incorporations, by the National Filter Company and the New York Filter Company, and have been utilized in the water-supply systems of a number of communities.

"In addition, as member of the New Jersey State Board of Health, State Analyst, and Chemist of the Essex County Medical Association, there has been constant occasion to examine the foods, drugs, and illuminants in use, disinfectants, and the atmosphere and sanitation of prisons, hospitals, and schools.

"As chairman of the committees of the American Water Works Association, 'to examine into the influence of vegetable and animal growths upon the taste, color, and odor of the potable waters,' and 'to memorialize the President and Congress to enact such laws as shall protect the public sources of water supply,' certain studies have been made and the results printed in the Reports of this Association.

"Membership is still retained in the British and American Associations for the Advancement of Science, the German and American Chemical Societies, the University Club of Philadelphia. I have also joined the National Arts and Harvard clubs of New York, finding the admirable library of the latter a great recourse in leisure hours.

"I have had two children, both living; the elder, Ruth Dalton Leeds, born 19 October, 1891, and the younger, Elizabeth Digly Leeds, 25 May, 1894, both at my home, which is 'Roadside,' Germantown, Pa., though my address and place of occupation are Hoboken, N. J."

Address: Stevens Institute of Technology, Hoboken, N. J.

*NATHANIEL COLVER LEEDS. He died at Cambridge, Mass., 4 December, 1867. See Secretary's Report, No. 2.

LOUIS CHARLES LEWIS. He remains in New York city engaged in the practice of law.

Address: 66 Broadway, New York city, N. Y.

CHARLES JAIRUS LINCOLN. He has continued since 1895 as head-master of the Dorchester High School.

Address: Dorchester High School, Dorchester, Mass.

ROLAND CROCKER LINCOLN. He has continued the practice of law in Boston. Since 1884 he has resided in Manchester, Mass.

On 23 April, 1890, he was chosen a member of the committee on Water Supply for the town of Manchester, making the report thereon, as its clerk, in February, 1891. From 4 April, 1891, to 1 March, 1897, he was a member of its Board of Water Commissioners, being clerk to 1894 and chairman of the board from 1894 to 1897. From 14 March, 1893, he was chairman of the Electric Light committee of the town, making the report thereon in March, 1895; and since 1 March, 1897, he has been chairman of the Public Library Trustees of Manchester.

He was in Europe in the summers of 1889, 1894, and 1899, and passed the winter of 1898–99 in Italy and Egypt.

He is a member of the Union Club, the St. Botolph Club, and the Twentieth Century Club of Boston.

Address: 346 Tremont Building, Boston, Mass.

ROBERT CLINDENON McILWAIN. He is still rector of St. John's Protestant Episcopal Church in Keokuk, Iowa. He has held this position for twenty-nine years.

Address: Keokuk, Iowa.

GEORGE HARRISON MIFFLIN. Not heard from. He remains in the publishing business as a member of the firm of Houghton, Mifflin and Company.

His eldest son, George Harrison Mifflin, Jr., was graduated from Harvard College in July, 1900.

Address: 85 Marlborough street, Boston, Mass.

LEBBEUS HORATIO MITCHELL. Not heard from. Our classmate McIlwain writes of him as follows: "In 1896 Col. L. H. Mitchell was in Johannesburg, South Africa. During 1897, and until July, 1898, his headquarters were at Salt Lake City, Utah. Since July, 1898, he has been in Central America, in Salvador, and Costa Rica. His work has been mineralogical and geological exploiting. At present he is in Salvador some seventy-five miles from La Union. His success in Salvador has been phenomenal — discovering and locating a vast mineral deposit, done by working on principles developed by long experience in the field of his chosen profession. His record is an admirable one. It would require a good-sized volume to report his work. The man is always greater than the work he does."

Address: Care of Rev. R. C. McIlwain, Keokuk, Iowa.

ALBERT MONROE MOORE. He has not been heard from by the Secretary since graduation. He is still residing in Lowell, Mass., and engaged in the practice of law.

*GEORGE WOODBURY SWETT. He died at Bonn, Germany, 27 July, 1869. See Secretary's Report, No. 3.

THOMAS EDMUND SYMMES. He writes in reply to the circular of the Secretary, as follows:

"My spare time during the winter succeeding my last report was spent in the manner there indicated. Money considerations then led me to take another course. The succeeding winter my attention was called to the consideration of the Great Pyramid of Egypt, as the finger-post of the Almighty. I prepared an article for publication on that subject for the Christian Herald of New York city, but it was not accepted. In this article I show the Pyramid's remarkable confirmation of Scripture Prophecy up to the present time — though built five thousand years ago — as well as the coincidence of its prophecies yet future with those of Holy Writ, and some other of its interesting features relating to the human race. In considering these matters, my attention became directed to the consideration of astronomy, and, during the last two winters I have been spending my spare moments, and some that were not spare, in writing an essay entitled, 'Some Astronomical and Planetological Deductions.'

"In this essay I undertake the solution of the following problems, whilst presenting at the same time many new and interesting features: (1) The cause of the present configuration of the earth's surface and the process by which it was brought about. (2) The direction of the central station of the universe from our globe, the marking of this point on the celestial sphere, and the production of the proof. (3) The source and manner of the stratification of the earth's crust and the period of its occurrence. (4) A different cause for the polar and equinoctial cycle of 25,765 years than that assigned by the great astronomers of the world, which may seem to be rather of a rash undertaking if I have not succeeded. (5) The way in which the different equatorial planes of the planets became inclined to the ecliptic. (6) The manner in which heat and light are sustained in the region of the exterior planets. (7) The origin and mission of comets. (8) The time, cause, and duration of the glacial period. (9) The origin of the primal racial divisions of humanity. (10) The best plan of the universe that can be made out from the proper motion of the stars and their seeming chaos of motion. This will be made out in harmony with the agglomeration of stars both telescopic and those visible to the naked eye. I also show why some portions of the heavens are poor in stars whilst in other portions they are abundant. The work will make a volume of one hundred pages or more if printed in duodecimo form and long primer type. If anyone can be found who will hazard remuneration for himself from the sale of copies, it will be published. Otherwise it will probably remain in the obscurity of my locker. I prepared the work in the hope that it would receive such favor as to afford me remuneration. If it is not, I shall have to continue my present prosaic struggle for existence. My eldest daughter, Harriet Elizabeth, died May 28, 1897, from the effects of measles and bronchitis."

" P. S.—I still continue as a public surveyor for the town of Westford. I served as juryman in the October term of the Superior Criminal Court sitting at Lowell and Cambridge, in the year 1895."

Address: Graniteville, Mass.

*JOHN KERR TIFFANY. He was born in St. Louis, Mo., 9 February, 1843. He died in St. Louis, 3 March, 1897.

EDWARD WALDO EMERSON. He refuses to give any information for our Class Reports. I learn from the Report of the Secretary of the Class of 1866, published in 1896, that he gave the following account of his life at that time: "Concord is, and is likely to be, my home while I live. Though nearer the city year by year, we are not yet suburban, and a healthy, friendly village life, simple and democratic, still exists, so I like to bring up my children here. From September, 1893, to May, 1895, I was abroad with my family. Kept house for the winter in Antiles, in Southern France, lived in other French towns, with much pleasure, painting most of the time, and passed the next autumn and winter in England, mostly on the South Devon coast. Before my departure and since my return I have continued to give the lectures on art anatomy at the school at the Museum of Fine Arts. I have also given other lectures in many cities and towns East and West. I do a little bad farming. Before I went abroad I was on the Board of Health of Concord, and the Library and Cemetery committees. I am now on the last two, and also the School Committee."

The next Report of the Class of 1866 will be published in 1901.

Address: Concord, Mass.

GEORGE AARON EMERSON. When last heard from, fifteen years ago, he was engaged in stock raising on his ranch in Rosalia, Butler County, Kansas.

CLEAVELAND FOOTE. He has continued to reside in New York city, and to carry on a commission business both domestic and foreign, as broker in old and new railroad material, as well as in scrap-iron and steel of all kinds. The Tredegar Company of Richmond, Va., which he formerly represented, no longer has an agency in New York.

CLASS MEMORIAL WINDOW.

The honor of being the first to propose that the Class present to the College in memory of those of the Class who surrendered their lives in the War of the Rebellion, a window for Memorial Hall, belongs to H. B. Williams. Upon his motion at a class meeting, held on Commencement day in 1896, a committee was appointed to arrange for the Memorial Window. This committee was composed of H. B. Williams, George H. Mifflin, John Greenough, T. Frank. Brownell, and Charles H. Tweed. The committee immediately entered upon the discharge of its duties, issued an appeal for funds, and engaged Mrs. Henry Whitman to design and carry out the work. On Commencement day, 1900, the work had been completed and the window was in position, and was on that day presented to the College.

A representation of the window is given at the beginning of this Report.
